

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025
Succession Planning and Family Holding Companies: Analysis of Basic Models Based on a Study Case

Succession Planning and Family Holding Companies: Analysis of Basic Models Based on a Case Study

Luiz Eduardo Tadros Pinho – Santa Tereza College, dudupt67@gmail.com

Paulo Eduardo Queiroz da Costa – Professor, Advisor

Summary

This article provides an in-depth analysis of succession planning as applied to companies. family members, emphasizing the use of the family holding company as a modern organizational tool. patrimonial, asset protection and structured intergenerational transfer of assets. The research adopts deductive methodology, based on an updated literature review, normative analysis, and study of Anonymous case involving a medium-sized business group in the service sector, whose The assets include real estate, vessels, and corporate holdings. Initially, the following are presented. Fundamentals of Inheritance Law and traditional models of inheritance upon death. addressing its practical limitations, costs, tax risks, and potential for litigation. Then, The legal nature, functionality, and advantages of family holding companies are examined, especially in... which relates to governance, business continuity, tax rationalization and conflict prevention. The interaction between donation, lifetime sharing, and usufruct, as well as the care involved, is also analyzed. necessary to respect the legal share, the property regime, and the protection of the necessary heirs. In conclusion, while not a universal solution, a holding company can be an efficient and secure instrument. when adapted to the specific financial and family circumstances, observing legal and tax limits. current models are being avoided, while also preventing standardization.

Keywords: succession planning, family holding company, family business, transfer Wealth. Family governance.

Abstract

This article provides an in-depth analysis of estate planning applied to family-owned businesses, with emphasis on the use of family holding companies as a modern tool for asset organization, protection and structured transfer of wealth between generations. The research adopts a deductive methodology based on updated legal literature, statutory analysis and an anonymized case study involving a medium-sized family business in the services sector, whose assets include real estate, vessels and equity interests. First, the article presents the basic foundations of Brazilian succession law and traditional models of transfer causa mortis, highlighting their practical limitations, costs, tax risks and potential for litigation. It then examines the legal nature, functions and advantages of family holdings, especially regarding corporate governance, business continuity, tax rationalization and conflict prevention. The interaction between gifts, inter vivos partition and usufruct is also analyzed, as well as the need to respect the forced heirship rules, marital property regimes and the protection of necessary heirs. The study concludes that the holding company, although not a universal solution, can be an efficient and safe instrument when adapted to the specific family and asset structure, in compliance with current civil and tax law and avoiding standardized, one-size-fits-all models.

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

Keywords: : estate planning. family holding. family business. wealth transfer. family governance.

1. Introduction

Increased longevity, the growing complexity of family structures, and the relevance of the economic landscape of family businesses in Brazil makes succession planning a central issue for Contemporary Private Law. The absence of prior organization of succession can lead to non-not only conflicts between heirs, but also the paralysis of business activities and the dilapidation of assets of heritage built over decades (TARTUCE, 2022).

The 2002 Civil Code offers traditional instruments for inheritance transfer — Legal succession, wills, donations, lifetime inheritance—but the dynamics of business demand, in many cases, complementary corporate solutions are needed. In this context, family holding companies have become... to be widely used as mechanisms for asset concentration, governance and anticipation of succession (DIAS, 2021; GONÇALVES, 2020).

However, the spread of this instrument was accompanied by a certain "mythologizing" of the holding company. often presented, in practical discourse, as a mechanism capable of solving, by itself, all Succession and taxation issues. Legal scholars warn of the risk of transforming the holding company into... A magic formula, without careful analysis of the specific case, the nature of the assets involved, and the... Family composition (VENOSA, 2019; STOLZE; PAMPLONA FILHO, 2019).

This article seeks to analyze, in light of Brazilian doctrine and legislation, basic models of Succession planning with and without a holding company, using a case study as a guiding principle. anonymized from a medium-sized family business that intends to structure its assets in a way to avoid future inventories, with the fundamental purpose of preserving business continuity.

The research problem can be formulated as follows: to what extent does the constitution or Adapting a business entity as a family holding company proves to be appropriate from this perspective. Legal and operational aspects of succession planning for a Brazilian family business. considering the instruments of Inheritance Law and the legal and tax limitations?

The overall objective is to analyze the advantages, limitations, and risks of using a business partnership. as a family holding company in estate planning, based on a specific case. Objectives include:

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

Specifically, the intention is:

- a) To present the concept of a family business and its specific succession characteristics;
- b) to systematize the main succession instruments available in the Brazilian legal system;
- c) to explain the characteristics and functions of the family holding company;
- d) to examine, in a case study, structural alternatives (donation, lifetime division, usufruct, contract amendment);
- e) discuss the suitability of the chosen model in light of civil and tax legislation.

The topic is relevant both theoretically and practically: from an academic point of view, it contributes to the debate.

Regarding the interface between Civil Law and Business Law; from a practical point of view, it offers valuable insights.

for more informed decisions by business owners and legal professionals in conducting planning. succession.

2. Theoretical Framework / Results

2.1. Family business and the challenge of succession

A family business is one in which members of the same family have significant participation.

The family nucleus is involved in the ownership and, frequently, in the management of the business. This is not a category. not an autonomous legal entity, but an economic and sociological phenomenon with a strong impact on law. Business (COELHO, 2021).

The doctrine points out that one of the moments of greatest vulnerability for a family business is precisely the succession of the founder or the controlling generation. Lack of planning can lead to Decision-making impasses, disputes between heirs, hasty sale of assets, and loss of business value. (GONÇALVES, 2020).

According to Maria Berenice Dias (2021), succession in family businesses requires reading integrated with the rules of succession, property regimes, and business law, under penalty of producing Formally correct solutions, but economically disastrous for the continuity of the activity.

2.2 Estate planning in Brazilian law

Succession planning can be defined as the set of legal acts, inter vivos or mortis causa, through which the owner of the assets organizes, in advance, the transfer of their assets, observing the legal limits of the legitimate share and seeking to reduce conflicts and costs. (TARTUCE, 2022).

The 2002 Civil Code provides for several instruments that can be integrated into planning.

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

succession, among them:

- will (articles 1857 et seq.), which allows the testator to dispose of up to 50% of his inheritance, respecting the legal share of the necessary heirs;
- donation (articles 538 et seq.), with the limitations provided for in articles 544, 548 and 549;
- division during life (art. 2.018), by which the ascendant may, by act inter vivos or last at will, to distribute their assets among their descendants, provided that it does not prejudice the legitimate share of the heirs. necessary;

– usufruct (articles 1,390 to 1,411), which allows the grantor to transfer the bare ownership and to reserve for themselves the use, enjoyment and administration of the property.

Flávio Tartuce (2022) highlights that succession planning is not to be confused with mere Tax economy: it must prioritize the protection of the dignity of the donor, and the observance of... legitimate and for the prevention of litigation, under penalty of being judicially annulled if it violates the rules. imperative or constitute fraud against creditors or the tax authorities.

2.3 Family Holding Company: Concept, Legal Nature, and Purpose

A holding company is, in simple terms, a company whose main function is to participate from the capital of other companies, controlling them or coordinating their activities (COELHO, 2021). When the purpose of a company is to consolidate a family's assets — movable property, real estate, Corporate holdings — for the purpose of organizing management and succession, this is referred to as a holding company. familiar.

From a legal standpoint, a family holding company does not constitute a specific type of company: it can take the form of a limited liability company, a corporation, or another type permitted by law. What the What characterizes it is its function: to be a vehicle for the holding and administration of family assets, and not necessarily the direct exercise of productive activity (VENOSA, 2019).

Among the most frequent purposes of a family holding company, legal scholars indicate:

- a) centralization of asset management;
- b) facilitation of succession, with the transfer of quotas or shares in place of each asset. individually;
- c) creation of governance and administration rules;
- d) asset protection, through contractual and corporate restrictions;
- e) potential tax efficiency, depending on the nature of the income and the tax regime.

taxation (DIAS, 2021; STOLZE; PAMPLONA FILHO, 2019).

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

2.4 Advantages and limitations of the family holding company

Specialized literature often points out the advantages of family holding companies, but emphasizes that its adoption must be preceded by rigorous technical analysis. Among the advantages, the following stand out: ease in the transfer of assets through quotas or shares; possibility of including clauses of inalienability, non-transferability, and non-seizability in relation to shares, protecting the family assets (DIAS, 2021); conflict reduction through a shareholder agreement that defines rules governing administration, profit distribution, and the entry or exit of partners (VENOSA, 2019); and lawful tax planning, especially regarding income derived from real estate rentals, when compared to taxation for individuals.

On the other hand, limitations and risks are pointed out: implementation and maintenance costs of structure; risk of losing eligibility for ITBI (Property Transfer Tax) exemption, pursuant to article 156, § 2, I, of Federal Constitution; possibility of questioning by the Tax Authorities in case of abuse of form or of exclusively tax-related purpose; and the need to reconcile corporate planning with the rules for protecting forced heirs (STOLZE; PAMPLONA FILHO, 2019).

The prevailing conclusion in legal scholarship is that the family holding company is not a universal solution. It should be viewed as one of several possible estate planning tools. (TARTUCE, 2022; DIAS, 2021).

2.5 Traditional models without holding

Succession planning can be developed without the use of a holding company, through... A combination of wills, donations, usufruct, and lifetime division of assets.

One model involves maintaining the assets in the name of the individual, with transmission upon death according to the rules of intestate succession, possibly supplemented by will. The advantage of this model is its simplicity, but it tends to generate more probate. complex, especially when there are indivisible assets or businesses.

Another model is that of donation with reservation of usufruct, widely used to anticipate the transfer of assets to heirs. According to article 544 of the Civil Code, a donation from an ascendant... The descendant's inheritance represents an advance on the inheritance, and must be brought into the estate, according to article... 549, a donation that exceeds the available portion is invalid. The use of donation as an instrument. The central aspect of planning, therefore, requires attention to the limits of what is available.

The division of assets during one's lifetime, as provided for in article 2.018 of the Civil Code, allows the ascendant to distribute... their property among their descendants, by inter vivos act or by will, provided that it does not prejudice. The legitimate share of the necessary heirs. Subject to legal formalities and acceptance by all.

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

In the case of heirs, a post-mortem inventory can be dispensed with, effectively functioning as a "probate" process.

"While still alive."

2.6 Models with family holding companies

In holding company models, the asset owner typically:

- to contribute assets (real estate, equity interests, vessels) to the share capital of a society;
- to distribute shares among themselves, spouse, and heirs;
- to reserve usufruct rights over the shares, guaranteeing income and administrative power;
- Establish governance rules in a company's articles of association or shareholders' agreement;
- plan the transfer of shares in a way that avoids inventorying the contributed assets.

From a tax perspective, special attention is paid to the ITBI (Tax on the Transfer of Real Estate), regulated by article 156, II, and § 2, I. of the Federal Constitution, which provides for immunity in the transfer of assets for the purpose of contributing to capital, unless the company's main activity is real estate (buying, selling, renting properties). or leasing). Thus, immunity depends on the company's purpose and the revenues actually generated. earned by society.

Regarding income tax and social contribution on net profit, the taxation of capital gains for legal entities may be more... This is a serious issue in the case of the sale of real estate, which recommends caution regarding the contribution of funds. goods with a prospect of being sold in the short or medium term.

2.7 Synthetic comparison between the models

In short, the models can be compared.

Without a holding company, focusing on wills, donations, and lifetime inheritance, the advantages lie in... Simplicity, lower structural cost, and operator familiarity with the instruments. traditional. The limitations lie in the tendency towards complex inventories, in the difficulty of Unified asset management in the absence of formal governance mechanisms.

With a family holding company, the advantages include asset concentration and easier succession planning. by quotas, possibility of governance rules and potential tax efficiency on income from Leasing. Limitations include setup and maintenance costs, and tax risks related to... ITBI exemption, greater accounting and corporate complexity, and the need for monitoring. Constant technical skill.

The choice between one model and the other — or a combination of both — depends on the size and of the nature of the estate, the family structure, and the objectives of the settlor, as evidenced in

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

The following case study will be presented.

2.8 Anonymized case study

2.8.1 Family and property context

The case study refers to a Brazilian businessman, married, who controls a company.

A medium-sized limited company in the transportation and tourism sector, hereinafter referred to as Grupo F Familiar Ltda., headquartered in a capital city in the Northern Region of Brazil.

The client had three daughters from his first marriage, which was dissolved by the death of his mother. wife, and also has a daughter born out of wedlock, who is recognized and equally integrated into the family. family context. Later, he remarried, under the regime of mandatory separation of property. assets, with a spouse who has no living descendants or ascendants.

The inquirer's assets, as considered for estate planning purposes in Brazil, are: composed of:

- a) residential and commercial properties;
- b) properties used in the company's activities;
- c) vessels used in transport activities;
- d) corporate holdings;
- e) Bank balances, financial investments and private pension plans.

The company Grupo F Familiar Ltda. already has the consultant as a shareholder, the current wife and daughters, which facilitates the adoption of corporate solutions without the need to create a new one. legal entity.

The consultant's stated objective is to organize their assets in order to avoid, as much as possible... If possible, the opening of probate proceedings will guarantee security for the current wife, and equitable treatment for all. daughters, continuity of the limited company's business activities, and cost reduction and bureaucracy in succession.

2.8.2 Planning Objectives

The legal and financial objectives are, in summary:

- a) to avoid the existence of significant assets in the name of the consultant and his wife on the occasion of their deaths;
- b) to concentrate, as far as possible, the operational assets (real estate used by the company and

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

vessels) in the company's assets;

- c) define, in advance, the transfer of shares to the heirs, reserving the usufruct.
- lifelong and joint in favor of the couple;
- d) to complete the inventory of the deceased first wife, regularizing the legal situation of the goods;
- e) to reduce the risk of litigation between the daughters, preserving family harmony.

2.8.3 Proposed structure of a family holding company

The technical consultation carried out identified that, instead of forming a new legal entity, it would be more efficient to take advantage of the existing limited liability company — Grupo F Familiar Ltda. — and adapt it to simultaneously perform the functions of an asset holding company and an operational holding company. This strategic use avoids additional costs of creating companies and preserves identity. The already consolidated organizational structure allows for structuring succession planning on known foundations. by family members.

The first necessary adaptation consists of expanding the social purpose to include expressly the administration of own assets, with the respective CNAE codes appropriate to real estate activities. This change legitimizes the company's role as a centralizer of assets. It allows the company to maintain ITBI (Property Transfer Tax) exemption when contributing real estate, provided that the gross revenue does not become predominantly from real estate.

Next, it is recommended to incorporate assets that should remain within the core business. assets, especially real estate used by the family, residential properties, vessels and other assets linked to business activities. This integration occurs through of an increase in share capital, transferring assets to the legal entity and conferring greater organization and security for the whole. Goods intended for future sale or speculative transactions. For tax prudence reasons, they should be kept outside the holding company.

The next step involves corporate reorganization focused on succession planning: a early transfer of shares belonging to the consultant and his wife to their daughters, reserving joint and lifetime usufruct in favor of the couple. This arrangement allows the client to... and his wife retain administrative control and economic enjoyment while they are alive, at the same time. The time it takes to anticipate the succession of shares, avoiding future inventories. Full ownership of The quotas will already be allocated to the successors, but the exercise of economic and political rights will remain. It will remain under usufruct, guaranteeing financial security and continuity in management.

Another essential point is the improvement of the administration clause in the articles of association. The current text, by providing only for management by the consultant and, in his absence, by his wife, shows itself to be insufficient to deal with scenarios of impediment, incapacity, prolonged absence or

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

The need for professional management. A more comprehensive clause allows for the designation of daughters.

specific circumstances to assume administration under previously defined conditions, establish institutional.

Clear replacement mechanisms and governance rules to ensure stability.

All these adjustments converge on one central objective: to ensure that, upon the death of if the consultant and subsequently his wife do not have any significant assets in the name of any individuals, avoiding lengthy probate processes, high costs, disputes over inheritance, and asset insecurity. Succession will occur automatically through the quotas, which have already been distributed and organized, without The need for subsequent judicial or extrajudicial intervention. The corporate structure becomes... the instrument of succession itself, and the articles of association function as the normative core that governs the continuity of the business and family assets.

2.8.4 Sharing during life and donation with usufruct

In the succession planning analyzed, it is fundamental to distinguish, with technical precision, the the legal concepts of donation and lifetime sharing, which are often treated as equivalent, but They have distinct legal natures, limits, and inheritance effects. Although both allow for... anticipation of asset transfer, how it impacts the legitimate share, collation, and control. Regarding the inheritance and legal security of heirs, the situation is profoundly different.

Donations—a classic form of generosity—have clear limits in the Civil Code. Article 549 establishes that a donation exceeding the disposable portion of the estate will be considered invalid. necessarily preserving the legitimate share of the necessary heirs. Furthermore, article 544 determines that a donation from an ascendant to a descendant constitutes an advance on inheritance, and must to integrate the hereditary estate for the equalization of shares. The donor may also establish usufruct. for life, guaranteeing their rights of possession, administration, and receipt of the proceeds from the property transferred (articles 1390 et seq.). However, even with the preservation of the usufruct, the property Full ownership is transferred to the donee.

The division of assets during one's lifetime, in turn, has a sui generis nature. It is regulated by article 2.018 of... According to the Civil Code, it allows an ascendant to distribute their assets among their descendants and spouse. or partner, provided that the legal share is respected. It differs from a donation because it is not subject to... within the limits of the available portion: the ascendant may distribute all of their assets, provided that it does not It does not prejudice the legitimate share, provided that all the necessary heirs participate and agree to the act.

The prevailing doctrine (TARTUCE, 2022; GONÇALVES, 2021) highlights that the division in

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

Life constitutes a true anticipation of the hereditary division, possessing immediate effects and dispensing with subsequent succession adjustments, provided that the following are observed:

- a) public instrument;
- b) participation and consent of all necessary heirs;
- c) explicit indication of the assets transferred;
- d) preservation of the minimum shares guaranteed by law.

In the specific context analyzed, this distinction gains practical relevance. Like all daughters and the founder's current wife is already a member of the corporate structure of Grupo F Familiar Ltda., it becomes It is possible to operationalize the advance transfer through the company's own corporate structure, without The need for individual deeds for the transfer of real estate or personal property. The replacement The traditional inventory process, replaced by corporate succession planning, offers greater agility and... predictability.

Thus, the transfer of shares to the daughters, with reservation of usufruct for life.

The joint agreement in favor of the client and his wife can be formalized directly in the contract. social, ensuring:

- maintaining control and economic enjoyment by the couple;
- the automatic transfer of shares to the legal heirs;
- the elimination of future inventory procedures;
- the standardization of corporate and asset management;
- reducing potential conflicts between successors.

The adoption of joint usufruct complies with article 1,411 of the Civil Code, allowing that, Upon the death of one of the usufructuaries, the other shall continue to fully exercise the right until their own death. death, a scenario authorized by law when stipulated in the articles of incorporation.

Furthermore, the corporate route avoids the limitations of a one-off donation (such as the cap on the portion). available), since the transfer of shares — when accompanied by usufruct and reorganization patrimonial — it functions as a reorganization mechanism and not as a pure act of generosity. In this way, the corporate arrangement proves to be safer, simpler, and more efficient, allowing for succession. occur without disruption to assets or operations, in accordance with doctrine. contemporary succession planning.

2.8.5 Need to complete the previous inventory

A central aspect of the estate planning examined is the existence of an inventory. The extrajudicial proceedings regarding the death of the consultant's first wife have not been concluded. Although article... Article 1.784 of the Civil Code stipulates that inheritance is automatically transmitted to the heirs upon the...

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

In the opening of the succession, this transmission occurs only on a theoretical and formal level, not fulfilling the...

The need for regularization of the documentation of the inherited estate through division.

Civil law doctrine is unanimous in stating that automatic transferability (saisine) does not grant the heirs full capacity to dispose of, register, alienate, or incorporate assets of the estate into their legal framework. Complex legal structures. Undivided inheritance establishes a forced joint ownership that, with the time tends to produce a state of financial and administrative uncertainty, incompatible with the dynamics of family asset management.

This framework is especially relevant when the intention is to establish or reorganize a corporate succession structure, as is the case here. The implementation of any planning involving the contribution of assets, corporate reorganization, or proportional distribution of shares. It necessarily requires knowing, with precision, who owns what. While the estate remains undivided; there is no legal definition of the assets belonging to the surviving spouse and the fractions attributed to them. to each heir, making the incorporation of these assets into the company's share capital legally imprudent. enterprise.

Therefore, before taking any steps toward reorganization, it is essential to complete the pending inventory. This conclusion can be reached in different ways, depending on the parties' decision and the specific circumstances of the heritage:

- a) Sale of estate assets followed by distribution of the proceeds;
- b) physical or legal division of assets between the surviving spouse and heirs;
- c) possible voluntary condominium agreement, on an exceptional basis;
- d) contribution of assets to a previously structured company, with the allocation of shares in proportion to their shares.

Regardless of the chosen method, completing the inventory is an indispensable step. to allow for succession and corporate reorganization. The absence of division compromises:

- the clear identification of the assets to be contributed;
- the correct tax valuation of assets;
- the protection of the legitimate share of the forced heirs;
- the legal security of the future holding company's articles of association;
- preventing conflicts arising from disputes over ownership.

Only after the respective shares have been defined — and, consequently, the ownership of full ownership of the remaining assets — it is possible to properly structure the contribution to the capital of society and outline the final architecture of the family holding company. This is, therefore, a prerequisite for validity and legal prudence, indispensable for all estate planning to proceed.

Develop with efficiency, transparency, and asset stability.

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

3. Materials and methods

The research adopts a deductive method, starting from the general principles of Inheritance Law and of Corporate Law, and then analyze its application in a specific case. Regarding Its objectives classify it as exploratory and descriptive, since it seeks to systematize concepts and describe... The application of succession models in real-life situations.

The technical procedure is bibliographic research, based on civil and business law doctrine. contemporary legislation (Federal Constitution, Civil Code) and jurisprudence of the Superior Court Court of Justice, as well as the use of an anonymized case study, developed from Genuine legal advice, with the suppression of personally identifiable information regarding personal and business data.

4. Results and discussion

A detailed analysis of the case allows for the extraction of relevant insights, not only for the situation. concrete, but also for understanding estate planning as a legal instrument. Modern, interdisciplinary, and focused on asset and business continuity.

First of all, it is clear that the use of a pre-existing limited company as a basis Establishing a family holding company represents a rational, economically efficient solution and Legally sound. Leveraging the existing structure reduces costs and avoids duplicate documentation. It simplifies tax obligations and preserves the corporate identity already consolidated over the years. The only indispensable condition is that the company's purpose be tailored to include activities of asset management, and that the corporate structure be reorganized in a manner consistent with the Planned succession. The formation of a new legal entity is not a logical imperative, but an alternative. which, in many cases, adds unnecessary complexity.

Secondly, it is evident that the adopted planning has a hybrid nature. simultaneously articulating mechanisms of Civil Law, Family Law, and Inheritance Law, Corporate Law and Tax Law. This is not simply a matter of corporate reorganization. but it's a multidimensional task, ranging from the protection of legal heirs to... Tax rationalization and internal corporate governance. The integration of assets, the reserve of usufruct, early transfer of shares, provision for staggered administration and redefinition The internal rules governing corporate succession form an interconnected set that, if applied in a fragmented way, would have limited effects. It is precisely in the integration between these institutions that the... Strength of the model.

This hybrid nature demands methodological care: any flaw in one of the axes can To compromise the whole. Legitimate succession needs to be preserved; the property regime needs to be respected; the corporate organization must ensure administrative continuity; and the tax analysis.

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

It must avoid the risk of losing tax exemptions or excessively increasing the tax burden. In other words,

It is a legal ecosystem, in which each piece exerts influence over the others.

Understanding this set of factors is essential for family businesses to make responsible decisions.

and so that legal professionals can act with technical precision.

Another key point is the observation that the formation of the family holding company — however

However sophisticated it may be, it does not replace the need for prior succession regularization. Security from the consultant. The absence of formalization of the division creates uncertainty regarding the ownership of the assets.

The effectiveness of the planning depends directly on the completion of the first wife's estate inventory.

It prevents secure integrations, hinders tax analysis, and increases the risk of future disputes.

among heirs. No corporate structure, however well-constructed, can stand on a foundation

The estate is undefined. Therefore, the first indispensable step is the completion of the pending inventory.

Without this, the planning would be structurally vulnerable.

From a doctrinal perspective, the study confirms the contemporary understanding that Estate planning should not be confused with tax planning. It necessarily includes...

elements of family protection, legal security, litigation prevention and rationalization of Asset management. The primary purpose of a family holding company is to organize the transfer of assets.

of assets in a safe, stable and coherent manner with the emotional and economic reality of the family — and not Simply reducing taxes. Fiscal savings can be a consequence, but it cannot be the core solution.

of the decision, under penalty of distorting the purpose of the institution and compromising the very validity of the planning.

Finally, the case analyzed clearly illustrates the warning that the holding company should be an instrument at the service of the family, and not a structure that subjects the family to artificial rigidity. It is the way

The legal system must adapt to the emotional, financial, and operational dynamics of the family, and not the...

On the contrary. Overly complex plans, motivated solely by issues.

Tax reforms tend to fail because they are incompatible with the daily reality of the members of the...

Family. Strategic simplicity — which should not be confused with superficiality — often produces Longer-lasting and more harmonious results.

The final reflection that this case offers is that a well-designed estate plan...

It functions as a bridge: it connects the heritage of the past with the family's future, preserving the Work built over generations, ensuring business continuity. It requires technique, Sensitivity and broad vision. And, above all, it requires coherence between family values and structure.

The legal framework employed and the economic reality that one wishes to protect. When these elements converge,

As in the model analyzed, planning not only fulfills its legal function, but also strengthens the foundations for preserving heritage and family harmony across future generations.

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

Final Considerations

The study concluded that succession planning in companies

Family law requires a multidisciplinary approach, integrating Inheritance Law, Law

Business and Tax Law. Simply adhering to the "holding company narrative" is not enough to guarantee... appropriate solution.

In theory, it has been found that the Brazilian legal system offers multiple instruments — wills, donations, lifetime division of assets, usufruct — that can be combined. A creative and lawful way to organize the transfer of assets, respecting the rights of the heirs. necessary and the limits of the available portion.

A family holding company presents itself as a useful tool in many scenarios, especially for:

- to consolidate dispersed assets;
- to facilitate transmission by quotas;
- to allow the establishment of governance rules;
- to promote, in certain situations, tax efficiency on rental income.

However, a holding company is neither a universal nor a purely tax-related solution. Its use requires analysis. careful consideration of family composition, type of assets, existence of previous inventories, and Property regime and its tax implications, especially with regard to ITBI (Property Transfer Tax) and capital gains. of capital.

The anonymized case study showed that it is possible, in certain situations, to adapt. a pre-existing business entity to function as a family holding company, integrating assets, anticipating the succession of shares with reservation of usufruct and structuring the company's administration. continuously. At the same time, it highlighted the need to complete past and future inventories. to avoid the incorporation of assets with a prospect of sale in the short term, due to taxation. more burdensome for legal entities.

In summary, the answer to the research question is as follows: a family holding company can be a A suitable succession planning model for Brazilian family businesses, provided it is incorporated In broader planning that combines classic civil instruments, observe the legislation. tax-related and should be built based on the concrete needs of the family and the business, and not on standardized solutions.

References

BRAZIL. Constitution (1988). Constitution of the Federative Republic of Brazil. Brasília, DF: Federal Senate, 1988.

Year V, v.2 2025 | Submission: 05/12/2025 | Accepted: 08/12/2025 | Publication: 10/12/2025

BRAZIL. Civil Code. Law no. 10,406, of January 10, 2002. Official Gazette of the Union, Brasília, DF, January 11, 2002.

COELHO, Fábio Ulhoa. Course on commercial law: company law. 20th ed. São Paulo: Saraiva, 2021.

DIAS, Maria Berenice. Handbook of Successions. 5th ed. São Paulo: Revista dos Tribunais, 2021.

GONÇALVES, Carlos Roberto. Brazilian Civil Law: Law of Succession. 20th ed. São Paulo: Saraiva, 2020.

STOLZE, Pablo; PAMPLONA FILHO, Rodolfo. Course on civil law: successions. 6th ed. Salvador: JusPodivm, 2019.

TARTUCE, Flávio. Civil Law: Law of Succession. 12th ed. Rio de Janeiro: Forense, 2022.

VENOSA, Silvio de Salvo. Civil Law: Law of Succession. 14th ed. São Paulo: Atlas, 2019.